What is Managed Security

Managed security is an outsourced complete end-to-end security solution for one or all of your security needs. Managed security solutions include customizing and configuring your security solution to meet your company's objectives. Once configured, a managed solution includes all testing, ongoing maintenance, adjustments, alerting and monitoring. In the event of a problem or disaster a security expert assists in the process of recovery or product configuration adjustments. Finally compliance level reporting is setup to support ongoing monitoring and reporting requirements.

Benefits of Managed Security

The benefits to customers varies depending on the needs of the organization. Many companies find that outsourcing solves problems resulting from shortage of technical staff, the need for a higher level of security expertise, the need to focus on other areas of the business or to be compliant with various regulations.

Outsourcing security brings the expertise of security focused teams to bear on all the areas of the security solution. This eliminates the need for companies to hire expensive dedicated staff. With an ongoing shortage of IT staff and a desire by company management to focus on revenue bearing activities, outsourcing can alleviate an ongoing shortage of experienced personnel. Managed security provides proactive monitoring, alerting and problem resolution. This is not always possible when internal IT staffs are pulled in multiple directions. Regulation compliance requires implementation of sophisticated solutions such as SIEM, threat monitoring, 2-factor authentication and business continuity. Getting help from outside experts can be a great way to get all these areas addressed at a high level.
